The Art of H.P. Lovecraft's Cthulhu Mythos

Edited by Pat Harrigan and Brian Wood

Cover Art by Michael Komarck

In his house at R'lyeh dead Cthulhu waits dreaming.

Within these covers some of today's most talented artists give you a glimpse of the haunting and macabre images inspired by author H.P. Lovecraft and the Cthulhu Mythos. From the sanity-destroying Great Old Ones to the mad cultists who worship them, from the gangsters of the Roaring '20s to the terrors of the 21st century, this book brings to life the dark and compelling images of the Cthulhu Mythos.

Take to the streets with the Blackwood Detective Agency and the O'Bannion mob, as strange forces lead to an unlikely alliance. Journey to Innsmouth, whose inhabitants seem afflicted by a strange malady, and where the song of the ocean is the hymn of an ancient religion. Look upon the most ancient of beings: Yog-Sothoth, who is the Key and the Gate; Shub Niggurath, the Black Goat of the Woods with a Thousand Young; He Who Must Not be Named and His avatar, the King in Yellow.

And finally, when the stars are right, behold Great Cthulhu himself, who lies dead but dreaming in the sunken city of R'lyeh.

The Art of H.P. Lovecraft's Cthulhu Mythos features lavish and lovingly crafted illustrations by dozens of talented and slightly insane artists: Michael Komarck, Paul Carrick, Anders Finer, Patrick McEvoy, Torstein Nordstrand, and many more. The images within are drawn from the roleplaying, card, and board games inspired by the Cthulhu Mythos and its horrible secrets.

Introduction

Lovecraft was not an imagistic writer. The stereotype is one of vague adjectives: abnormal, unutterable, monstrous. And true, we're told of Great Cthulhu:

The Thing cannot be described—there is no language for such abysses of shrieking and immemorial lunacy, such eldritch contradictions of all matter, force, and cosmic order. A mountain walked or stumbled.

But consider what else is said of Cthulhu, when the Great Old One first rises from R'lyeh: its gelatinous green immensity, the green, sticky spawn of the stars, the flabby claws, the mountainous monstrosity, the pursuing jelly, the awful squid-head with writhing feelers. And, with the most pungent adjective in all of Lovecraft, great Cthulhu slides greasily into the water.

Earlier in "The Call of Cthulhu" we have been shown both a bas-relief and a small carving of Cthulhu, the latter of which furnishes a particularly concrete description:

It represented a monster of vaguely anthropoid outline, but with an octopus-like head whose face was a mass of feelers, a scaly, rubbery-looking body, prodigious claws on hind and fore feet, and long, narrow wings behind.

In this way Cthulhu's shape is delineated long before we see it. Later, when we view the Thing itself, Lovecraft feels no need to describe Cthulhu further, except inasmuch as the creature differs from its image: Therefore he tells us of Cthulhu's mountainous size and—confirming his "rubbery-looking body"—his disgusting softness and pliability. When Cthulhu finally appears in the story, Lovecraft is able to elaborate on the meaning of his physical presence, and how it destroys the lives and sanity of those who behold it.

In the scene of Cthulhu chasing the crew of the Emma we can observe the heart of Lovecraft's philosophy: man, tiny and insignificant, pursued by forces vast, terrible, and incomprehensible. But the fact that Great Cthulhu is a symbol is trivial. If that was all there was to it, I doubt we'd still be talking about it almost eighty years later. No, what's memorable about Cthulhu is the awful physicality, the enormous bulk, the wings and tentacles, the greasiness. This is the clay made flesh. It's no surprise that in the book you're reading now, two separate artists have given us renditions of this awful, almost primal scene.

In truth Lovecraft's horrors were almost always physical: Think of the dissolution of Dr. Muñoz in "Cool Air," the flesh-eating canine things of "Pickman's Model," and Walter Gilman's fate in "The Dreams in the Witch-House." In later stories, Lovecraft delighted in describing alien societies, but he also loved alien bodies: squamous Deep Ones, fungoid Mi-Go, the conical Great Race, and the star-headed Old Ones of Antarctica, frozen in ice and put on display for our wonderment. Even the Haunter of the Dark sears a single organic image into our brains, with its three-lobed burning eye.

His cities and landscapes are equally palpable. Arkham has its crumbling gable roofs, Kingsport its mists, and Dunwich its squalid shacks. Even the unknown places evoke images; when we are told of the "demonic plateau of Leng," our minds are given space to project an image of this sinister place—a panorama sketched in a few syllables.

Of course, the modern Cthulhu Mythos encompasses more than just Lovecraft. In this book you will find images drawn from or influenced by the works of Robert E. Howard, Clark Ashton Smith, Robert Bloch, Frank Belknap Long, August Derleth, Robert Chambers, Ramsey Campbell, James Blish, Brian Lumley, and T.E.D. Klein, not to mention the diseased minds of those at Chaosium and Fantasy Flight Games.

In this book you'll see things you've never seen before—or maybe you have seen them, if you're truly gifted, or truly unlucky. The Lovecraftian vision is one of uncomfortable things lurking just beyond normal sight. Lovecraftian horror is a photograph from life.

Forbidden Knowledge

Wherein we find scholars, magi, and those who make a study of the hermetic and arcane. Take, for instance, the Silver Twilight Lodge. It may seem to be a harmless diversion for the well-heeled modern eccentric, but behind its ritualistic hogwash lies something darker, and much, much older. Perhaps hints of the lodge's real purpose may be gleaned from the fabled Necronomicon of the Mad Arab Abdul Alhazred. A copy of this dark tome can be found in Miskatonic University's Rare Book Room, and Professor Henry Armitage has become only too familiar with its dread passages. Other scholars we discover here have sought understanding through unethical experiments or magickal rites. In any case it is clear that knowledge of this sort comes at great risk to sanity and soul.

Visitors

Wherein we welcome some guests to our shores. The loathsome Fungi from Yuggoth are here, and the ghouls of the earth, as well as even less recognizable figures. We can only speculate why our insignificant planet has received so much unwelcome attention. Ours is a warm and lively world, and seems to hold an irresistible attraction to those who are anything but.

Law and Disorder

Wherein we meet a few heroic or foolish souls. Here is the Blackwood Detective Agency, with its network of police officers, federal agents, and informants, now led by Norman Blackwood Jr., after the disappearance of his father. Here also is Danny O'Bannion's criminal syndicate, men of greed and low character, whose motives are questionable and whose first resort is violence. These unlikely allies have begun to piece together a mystery that may spell the doom of all mankind. They have burned and murdered their way from Arkham to New York City to Cairo, and will not stop their bloody business until they have saved the world, or what's left of it.

Strange Pastimes

Wherein we can find all manner of unusual practices. Note especially the pervasive mark of Shub-Niggurath, the horrid Mother. She spawns uncountable servants of all forms and types, and attracts worshippers from the outcast, the perverse, and the deranged. In the caverns of the world they crawl and scuttle, and in the rotting earth they unceasingly burrow.

The Deep

Wherein we meet many of those that worship Great Cthulhu. His cult is not so much a conspiracy as it is a parallel civilization, with citizens in every country on earth and some beyond it. Acolytes can be found in the lowest hovel and the tallest skyscraper, in the most exclusive lodges and the most crowded pestilential warrens. They give worship in the damp and crumbling churches of Dagon and among the green-and-golden spires of Y'ha N'thlei. For all of human history and long before, the cult of Cthulhu has awaited the rising of R'lyeh, when mankind will become as the Great Old Ones, and all shall shout and kill and revel in joy.

Expeditions

Wherein we receive reports from the far-flung, hidden places of our sphere. Few eyes but ours have beheld Kadath in the cold waste, the ruins of Hyperborea, or the Older Pyramids. These pilgrimages are for many separate purposes, and their funding comes from many obscure sources. If we could somehow discover it, the list of backers would read: Miskatonic, Blackwood, O'Bannion, Glasser...but we would also read the names of the sinister Carl Stanford, and the mysterious figure known only as Vaughn. Why? What do they hope to find?

The King in Yellow

Wherein we admire the artistry of the tattered King. In the silent ballroom of the Palace of Yhtill in the shadowed city of Carcosa, He is rumored to have stepped—but those who were there that day have not spoken of this to us. We can only catch sight of Him briefly, in the rarest transportations of art, such as those on display in Victoria Glasser's famous gallery. Lovely, wealthy, and enigmatic, Victoria is a true connoisseur of the avant-garde.

The Crawling Chaos

Wherein we are given troubling hints of the Outer Voids. Behold the Crawling Chaos Nyarlathotep, in all his multiform glory. His mocking smile we may remember from the darkest moments in our lives. Glimpse here also Yog-Sothoth, The Key and the Gate, whereby the spheres meet. Its worshippers know the secret ways between the worlds, and they believe they know Yog-Sothoth, but Yog-Sothoth is unknowable, and Its motives are beyond comprehension. Still, it can be assumed that, as with Nyarlathotep, Yog-Sothoth is not of this world, and has no especial love for it.

Artist Bios

Aaron Acevedo

Aaron Acevedo was born in 1971 and raised in Schenectady, New York. He is a self-taught digital artist with a diverse client list, including Alderac Entertainment Group, Fantasy Flight Games, Laughing Pan Productions, Mongoose Publishing, West End Games, and Wizards of the Coast. Aaron is currently Art Director for Pinnacle Entertainment Group. You can see more of his work online at www.aaronace.com.

Samuel Araya

Rumor tells that South American cultist Sam Araya was born under a gibbous moon, that he rides the thousand goats of Shub-Niggurath, and that his favorite book is The King in Yellow. But truth be told, he just wants to build giant robots, or just robots, really. His artwork can be seen at: <http://www.paintagram.com>.

Laurel Austin

Laurel Austin was born in Toronto, Ontario, and has always had a great love of fantasy/sci-fi games and art. She was educated at NSCAD University and currently resides in Halifax, Nova Scotia, on the Atlantic coast of Canada. She makes her living in freelance scientific and fantasy illustration, and storyboarding.

Jill Bauman

Jill Bauman has been a freelance illustrator/designer for 27 years. In that time she has produced hundreds of covers for horror, mystery, fantasy, science fiction, and fantasy books and magazines. She has illustrated works by Harlan Ellison, Stephen King, Peter Straub, Lilian Jackson Braun, Charles L. Grant, Robert McCammon, Richard Laymon, Jack Williamson, Hugh B. Cave, Pamela Sargent, Michael Resnick, J. G. Ballard, David Brin, and Fritz Leiber. She has been nominated for the World Fantasy Award five times and nominated for the Chesley Award several times. Her art has been exhibited at the Delaware Art Museum, the Moore College of Art, the NY Art Students League, and the NY Illustrators Society. Along with her freelance career, she has been an art agent, representing Walter Velez, a well-known science fiction/fantasy artist, for 28 years. Along the way, she has also represented Richard Bober, Alan Clark, and others. Her dark poetry has been published in Weird Tales, Flesh and Blood, Time and Space, Inhuman, and The Horror Express. She has completed illustrations for a collection of her poetry, entitled Inkblots. She lives in Queens, New York, and her website is www.jillbauman.com.

Alan Bednar

Alan Bednar was born in Chicago, but moved to the UK at the age of 15, where he happily resides with his wife Charis and their two children. He has worked for a number of game companies and publishers. More of his work can be seen at <http://allanbednar-gallery.nysite.wanadoo-members.co.uk/>. Alongside freelance illustration, he is currently halfway through a degree in psychology.

Carlo Bocchio

Carlo Bocchio was born in Tarquinia, Italy, in 1974 and later attended art school. He began his career writing and drawing comic strips, and has recently begun painting as well. He has illustrated covers for books and roleplaying games, and also teaches illustration and drawing for comics in one of the more important schools of media art in Rome. He is also working with a film writer, with the goal of translating his work and characters to the big screen. His web site can be found at <http://www.carlobocchio.com>.

Paul Burrow

Paul Burrow lives in East Yorkshire, UK. He is a self-taught illustrator, specializing in sci-fi and fantasy art. Heavily influenced by the original Star Wars trilogy, Paul has been drawing and painting sci-fi art since the age of 5. His website scifiartist.com has been online since March 2000.

Felicia Cano

Worshiper of the Great Old Ones when the sun was young, Felicia channels the emanations of the dread Shub-Niggurath through the blood of the lesser elementals of water and air. But due to the oppressive health codes of the Americas, she has to resort to more traditional and less psychically toxic materials. Tapping the essence of the PowerBook of the Necronomicon and the Dread Stylus of Wacom, she creates horrible nightmarish visions, which you can see at your own risk at www.feliciacano.com.

Paul Carrick

Paul Carrick was born and raised on the island of Martha's Vineyard, located off of Cape Cod, Massachusetts. His parents were a writer/illustrator team for children's books, and several of their books were based on Paul's experiences as a child. Right in Lovecraft's backyard, Paul attended the Rhode Island School of Design in Providence, Rhode Island. Reading Lovecraft's writings within mere blocks of the setting must have affected him, as it is one of his most favorite subjects to illustrate. He would like to finally dispel the rumors of his being related to the Marsh family, and, no, those aren't gills. Please feel free to visit his online gallery at www.nightserpent.com.

Miguel Coimbra

Miguel Coimbra (aka toastyyy) was born in December 1977. He is both Portuguese and French and is currently living in Lyon, France. He began his career in the computer field but quickly became bored and taught himself illustration and CG. He has been working in the entertainment industry for five years, first as a graphic designer, then as a concept artist for Eden Games, and now as a full-time freelance illustrator for roleplaying games, CCGs, and books. Now he really loves his job, since drawing and painting makes him feel happy every day.

Daarken

Daarken graduated from the Academy of Art University in 2004 with a BFA in traditional illustration. Since then he has worked for clients such as Wizards of the Coast, Fantasy Flight Games, Triad Toys, BreakAway Games, and Widescreen Games. He currently freelances full time, producing fantasy illustrations and concept art for video games, and one day hopes to teach. His website is www.daarken.com.

Thomas Denmark

Thomas Denmark started his art career with Play-Doh and Legos around the age of two. Soon after he started drawing and hasn't stopped since. He lives with his wife Molly and his cat Zeus in northern California. You can view more of his work at www.studiodenmark.com.

Alejandro Diaz

Alejandro Diaz was born in Maracaibo, Venezuela, and moved to the US in the early '90s. A jack of all trades, Alex has a degree in Materials Science and Engineering, a full-time job as a graphic designer, and also is a Taiko (Japanese drumming) performer.

Juan Carlos Diaz

Juan Carlos Diaz has freelanced for editorial, greeting card, and science fiction work. He has currently jumped aboard a video game development studio, where he is learning a lot from the "pixel art masters." He studied in southern California and at the Rhode Island School of Design, but credits most of his learning to the doodles he created in his childhood, both past and present.

Chris Dien

Chris Dien has loved drawing since early childhood, but never considered a career in art. After graduating from high school, Chris served three years in the U.S. Army. Then he completed his Bachelor's degree in business. During this time Chris taught himself how to paint and draw. Upon seeing some of his work on the internet, Chris was approached by a card game company to produce art for their collectible card game. Since then he has gone on to work professionally doing illustrations for card games and roleplaying games for various publishers in the industry.

Katherine Dinger

Katherine Dinger is a Texas-based illustrator/photographer who enjoys portraying unusual characters in fanciful or horrific environments. She derives her inspiration heavily from fellow artists, dreams, and music.

Matt Dixon

Fergus Duggan

Fergus Duggan has been a 3D artist and 2D concept artist for the computer games industry for over seven years. He has recently moved into freelance illustration and has worked for a variety of roleplaying companies, where he produces horror, sci-fi, and fantasy artwork. His work can be viewed at www.fergusduggan.com.

Vincent Dutrait

Vincent Dutrait was born in France in 1976, and spent his childhood in the hills of Provence in the south of France. Later he studied illustration and computer art at the Emile Cohl art school in Lyon, graduating in 1997. He now lives in South Korea, working on roleplaying games, children's books, and adventure and fantasy stories. His favorite medium is acrylic painting. He loves fantastic literature (especially William Hope Hodgson) and the wondrous paintings of Newell Convers Wyeth. He website is <http://www.vincentdutrait.com>.

Jesper Ejsing

Jesper Ejsing was born in 1973. He lives in Copenhagen, Denmark, sharing a studio with ten other artists. Ever since he drew a portrait of his very first D&D character he knew he was going to do this for a living. He has no formal artistic education, having opted out of a university degree in Danish literature and art history to become a freelance artist. He began his career as a comic books colorist and later moved on to book covers. In the beginning he illustrated history books, but now does exclusively fantasy art. In 2001 he wrote a handbook about live roleplaying, and has followed it up with two more. All three of them have been bestsellers in Denmark. He has written a novel, Jarvis: The Sorcerer's Apprentice, to be published by Fantasy Flight Games. Other work for FFG includes contributions to Runebound, Descent, World of Warcraft: The Board Game, and numerous other smaller board games and rulebooks. He has a 9-month-old son named Asbjørn, which in old Danish means "God of Bears."

Fabien Fernandez

Fabien Fernandez (aka fablyrr) is a French illustrator. He works in several different mediums (painting, pen, ink, computer illustration, etc.).

Anders Finér

Anders Finér is a self-taught artist born in Torsby, Sweden. He has worked on comic books, CCGs, roleplaying games, graphic novels, computer games, CG commercials and a CG animated feature. Some of projects include The Seventh Shrine, The Hedge Knight, Arkham Horror, The Longest Journey, and Free Jimmy.

John Goodenough

John Goodenough was born in 1975, and has finally found a way to blend his passion for art and games as a fantasy game illustrator. As an avid game enthusiast, John also playtests many of the games he helps illustrate. He feels that his most successfully illustrations help communicate how the actual game mechanic on the card works. John currently lives in Minnesota and works on the other side of the drawing board as a game developer.

John Gravato

John Gravato is originally from South Africa and currently resides in the United Kingdom. He has been in the publishing industry for eight years, working as a concept illustrator and sculptor for PS2 and Xbox games, and as a hired gun for several game and magazine publishers.

Cris Griffin

Christine Griffin is a mom, wife, artist, and eternal seeker of the perfect hair color. She has a Master's Degree in Painting and a cat who thinks that sharing the computer chair is her God-given right. For more examples of Cris's work, see <http://griffingirl.epilogue.net>. Cris is available for commissions, as time permits...and if the payment involves chocolate.

Josh Hagler

Joshua Hagler received his B.F.A. in Studio Art from the University of Arizona in 2002. He currently lives and works in San Francisco as an artist of multiple disciplines. His work has been shown work in galleries and museums throughout the United States, and in 2005 he was nominated for the San Francisco Bay Area Emerging Artist Award at the San Francisco Center for Design Galleria. He is currently developing his first graphic novel, entitled The Boy Who Made Silence, the first chapter of which can be read at www.joshhagler.com. His current projects include a collaboration with comics veteran Sam Kieth on the comic book miniseries My Inner Bimbo, published by Oni Press. His work will also appear in Spectrum 13 in Fall 2006. To find out more about shows and publications, check out <http://joshuahagler.livejournal.com>. Mr. Hagler is currently represented by Quattro Media in Los Angeles.

Andrew Hall

Andrew Hall is an illustrator/concept artist from Hertfordshire, England. He is currently developing computer games in the heart of London, working freelance when he can, or when Cthulhu comes knocking. At his website, <http://www.artbyandy.com>, you can contact him, browse all his Cthulhu work, and read more of his spiel.

Nils Hamm

Nils Hamm was born in 1973 in Germany, and lives and works as an illustrator and artist in the lovely city of Düsseldorf. For more works by Nils, please visit www.raketula.de.

Pat Harrigan

Pat Harrigan is a Minneapolis-based writer and editor. With Noah Wardrip-Fruin he has edited two volumes of academic essays for MIT Press: First Person: New Media as Story, Performance and Game, and Second Person: Role-playing and Story in Games and Playable Media. He is also author of the novel Lost Clusters.

Mats Holmberg

Mats Holmberg is an artist from Stockholm, Sweden, who has been drawing sci-fi-related art since...as far back as he can remember, really. However, it wasn't until 2003 that he began doing colored work, and he is now trying to combine his "hobby" of painting with a full-time job as an architect.

Rafal Hryniewicz

Rafal Hryniewicz was born and raised in Poland but currently resides and works in the Netherlands. He started his freelance career in 2001 and has worked on various projects since, though he mainly specializes in fantasy illustration. His works have been published in games, books, comics, albums, and websites. He is also an editor for the Epilogue.net web gallery.

Uwe Jarling

Uwe Jarling was born in 1968, and after graduating in 1991 with a degree in graphic design, he worked as an illustrator and graphic designer. His first works were countless covers for videos, books, and many technical and architectural illustrations for advertising agencies. In 2000, he began to concentrate more seriously on fantasy artwork. Although he has traditionally worked in oils, watercolors, and gouache, since 2003 almost all of his work has been painted digitally, for clients all over the world. He lives and works in a little village in the south of Germany. His website can be found at www.jarling-arts.com.

Tomasz Jedruszek

Tomasz Jedruszek was born in Poland in 1977. When he was 6, he received his first comic album (of Thorgal) from his father. Ever since then, he has wanted to be an artist, and to tell stories with images, just like Rosinski. In the following years he was also influenced by Gimenez, Giger, Manara, Sorayama, Vallejo, Frazetta, Brom, and Mullins. He was educated in math and physics in high school, and at first intended to become a software engineer, but wound up receiving a degree in Architecture. In the third year of his studies he began work as a professional artist for the Polish RPG/fantasy publisher Portal. The greatest adventure of his life had begun, although his course work suffered. Finally he found some free time to graduate, after nine years of "studying." He is now working as a freelance artist, and in his free time developing his own project, Venhelis.

Andrew Johanson

Andrew Johanson spent his early years growing up along the Oregon coast. He then migrated east, graduating from the Rhode Island School of Design in 2004. Andrew now does freelance illustration out of his home in Nevada, where he lives with his sweetie Jen and their pet turtle.

Dave Kendall

Dave Kendall is a British-based illustrator specializing in fantasy and horror. He is currently working on book covers, comics, role-playing and card games. As a big fan of all things horrific, he has produced paintings and imagery for Brian Lumley and Ramsey Campbell. He continues to try to remember his nightmares in the hope that they can make it to canvas.

Jonathan Kirtz

Jonathan Kirtz has been a freelance artist in the pen & paper industry for two and a half years. He currently resides in Virginia where he works at Mythic Entertainment as a concept artist on the upcoming PC MMORPG Warhammer Online: Age of Reckoning.

Michel Koch

Michel Koch was born in France in 1980. After some science education he decided to enter the Emile Cohl art school in Lyon. He now works as a freelancer for several publishing and game companies such as Triking Games, Fantasy Flight Games, AEG, and Pocket. He is currently working with a French writer on an illustrated sci-fi novel. He especially loves dark and bizarre subject matter and moods.

Michael Komarck

Michael Komarck was born in Louisiana and promptly relocated to Michigan where he's lived ever since. As the years passed, he transitioned from crayons to pencils to acrylics to oils. In 1989 he found himself at a community college, where his suspicions that he was better off self-taught in art were proven correct almost immediately. After several years as a projectionist at the local cineplex, he co-founded a small publishing company. However, with the exception of illustrating several children's books, the majority of his time was spent designing business cards, ads, and eventually web-related material (mostly Flash animation). It was during this period that he was introduced to Photoshop and ultimately replaced his oils with digital paint. He is now a full-time illustrator, and has created covers for many authors, including Robert Asprin and George R.R. Martin.

Kyri Koniotou

Born in London, Kyri Koniotou studied art at Middlesex University. He is currently living in London, working as a full-time freelance illustrator and painter for various clients in the gaming industry. Some of his artistic influences include Egon Schiele, Gustav Klimt, Kent Williams, Justin Sweet, Glenn Fabry, and many others.

John Kovalic

USA Today called John Kovalic a "hot pick." His creations include the comic book Dork Tower, as well as Dr. Blink: Superhero Shrink, Snapdragons, and many other features. His work has appeared everywhere from The New York Times, The Washington Post, and Rolling Stone to Dragon magazine. John is co-founder, co-owner, and Art Director of Out of the Box Games (producers of the million-selling, multi-award-winning Apples to Apples, among many other games). He also created the Whad'ya Know party game in 2003. His Dork Tower comic book is a multi-Origins Award winner, while John's work on games like Munchkin and Chez Geek has also garnered multiple awards. In July 2003, John was inducted into the Academy of Adventure Gaming Arts and Design Hall of Fame, the first cartoonist to receive such an honor. His web site can be found at www.dork-tower.com. In his spare time, John searches for spare time.

Henning Ludvigsen

Henning Ludvigsen is a Norwegian digital artist with a traditional art education and twelve years of experience in digital art, design, and illustration. He is currently working as Art Director at a computer game development company in Greece, and is working on personal projects and commissions during his spare time. He is an award-winning artist, featured in books like Exposé 3 and Exotique (both from Ballistic Publishing), and on dozens of web-sites. He is also one of the expert panel artists for the magazine Imagine FX (Future Publishing).

Roberto Marchesi

Roberto Marchesi is a 28-year-old Italian/Danish illustrator and concept artist, originally trained as an architect at the Academy of Art in Copenhagen. After a couple of years as a children's book and fantasy illustrator he began working as a concept artist for the Danish software company IO Interactive. In his spare time he freelances for clients like Fantasy Flight Games, Wizards of the Coast, Steve Jackson Games, White Wolf, and AEG.

John Matson

John Matson developed his love of fantasy and science fiction at an early age, regularly covering his school folders and homework with doodles of an alien and barbarian persuasion. Born and raised in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, he attended Milwaukee High School of the Arts and graduated in 1994 from the Milwaukee Institute of Art and Design (MIAD) with a BFA in Illustration. In addition to a sometimes hectic freelance schedule, he now teaches what was his favorite class at MIAD.

Michael May

Hailing from beautiful Colorado, Mike May currently works full time as a freelance illustrator, specializing in fantasy artwork. His artwork ranges from nightmarish to cartoony, and he is always searching for fun new styles.

Patrick McEvoy

A professional illustrator since 2002, Patrick McEvoy has worked in games, comics, concept art, and book illustration. Initially working in traditional painted media like his inspirations N.C. Wyeth, Frank Frazetta, and Jim Steranko, he has been busily concentrating on creating art with the computer for the last two years, attempting to blend the best of both worlds in his illustrations. His original oil painting of the Great Old One Ithaqua (originally created for Fantasy Flight's Arkham Horror board game, and included on page 29 of this volume) won the "Best Horror" award at the 2005 Dragon*Con art show. Patrick spends what little free time he has with his wife and cats in Northern California.

Jeremy McHugh

Jeremy McHugh is a New Hampshire-based fantasy illustrator. He began his art career five years ago and is one of the fortunate folks who genuinely loves his job. A relative newcomer to the Cthulhu Mythos, Jeremy enjoys creating images of tentacled perversions and dark horrors.

John Moriarty

John Moriarty has been working as a freelance artist since 2001 after graduating from the Hussian School of Art in Philadelphia. He grew up in South Jersey and currently resides in Philly, where he works in graphic design. John's illustrations are entirely in acrylics, and he has thus far avoided the temptation to work digitally. More of his artwork can be seen at www.johnmoriartyart.com.

Socar Myles

Socar Myles likes rats, drawings, and, not surprisingly, drawings with rats on them. She also likes springtime, the outdoors, and the way grape juice tastes when one is incredibly thirsty. Her favorite hobby is playing huge, elaborate practical jokes. There's not much else to say about Socar Myles, except that she's an illustrator living in BC, Canada.

Torstein Nordstrand

Torstein Nordstrand is taking advantage of the digital age to create evocative art for companies all over the world. His paintings, frightening or fantastic, add vision to the worlds of many major publishers of fantasy entertainment. When he is not busy exploring another piece of ghastly art, he spends his time trying not to frighten off his newborn son Erlend and wife Christine. You can see much more of Torstein's horror work at www.torsteinnordstrand.com.

Terry Pavlet

Terry Pavlet is an award-winning illustrator and graphic designer, whose work has appeared in many roleplaying games, comic books and magazines. He has done everything from fantasy to animation, and logo design to product literature for many commercial clients, all digitally and with the aid of a good ol' #2 pencil. He still lives in his native Wisconsin, with his family, having fun with what he does for a living. More information can be found at www.hausofdesign.com and www.terrypavlet.com.

Ted Pendergraft

Ted Pendergraft first began working in the film and television industry as a concept and production designer before beginning his senior year of college. He has since established himself as a premier game development and high-end illustration vendor doing business as www.tedwork.com. His recent projects include character design on a PSP title for Sony Computer Entertainment of America, concept design for a Playstation 3 game to be released by Sony Online Entertainment, and Wizards of the Coast's Dungeons and Dragons RPG. He is currently considering full-time employment opportunities in the video game industry in order to become better prepared for future development of next-generation independent properties.

Nick Percival

An award-winning illustrator, Nick Percival has written and directed many CG animation sequences for video games and FX. Nick has also created concept, design, and production artwork for many of the world's leading video game publishers. His artwork can also be seen in Marvel comics, 2000AD, and collectible card games. He currently develops projects for comic books, games, film and television. His website is www.nickpercival.com.

Edward Reed

Edward J. Reed, who goes by Ted, is an artist and illustrator who lives in Virginia with his wife and two young daughters. He teaches portrait, figure, and still life painting at The Art League School. In the fine art world, he has painted portraits of U.S. congressmen and Hollywood movie stars and won awards in national and international juried competitions. His colleagues, clients, and students in the fine art world have no idea, however, that extensive exposure to the Cthulhu Mythos in literature, RPGs, and CCGs has severely compromised aspects of Ted's sanity. Far too often he finds himself, in the small, lonely hours of the morning, furiously painting away at troubling visions of impossible creatures with far too many tentacles.

Natascha Roeoesli

Natascha Roeoesli was born and raised in Switzerland as the only daughter of two photographers. She is now working in Greece as a freelance illustrator and concept artist for gaming companies, private clients, authors, and publishers. Her award-winning art and tutorials have been published in several books and magazines, and on websites.

Christian Schwager

Born in a small town in Bavaria in 1974, Christian Schwager has been drawing and painting since the day he could hold a pen in his nifty little hands. His favorite subjects are science fiction and fantasy themes, but his works are also featured in advertising and on CD covers. Christian is currently living and working in New Zealand, drawing inspiration from the lands of Middle Earth.

Lars Simkins

Lars Simkins really dislikes bios. So much so that whenever he's asked to write one he usually submits a tirade against them in its place. Maybe it's his inability to prioritize information, or his assumption that the details of his life are unspeakably (or unwritably) boring. Who can say? Certainly not he. Thankfully he does let the sincerely curious know to visit atomicagedog.com for more of his art, music, and films. Cheers.

Marc Simonetti

Marc Simonetti was born in 1977 in Lyon, France. He studied fine arts in the "Beaux Arts" of Annecy, a lovely medieval place in the Alps with a great lake, which gave him his love of backgrounds. He then studied at the Emile Cohl School of Lyon and later worked for two years in the video game industry as a background artist. He now produces work for video games, SF novel covers, comics, roleplaying games, and collectible card games.

Oliver Specht

Oliver Specht was born in 1972 in Germany, and studied at the Emile Cohl art school in Lyon, France. He has worked as a concept artist for various video games, most recently on Anno 1701. He is currently working as an art director at a video game company in Berlin, Germany.

Yulia Starsev

Yulia Starsev was born in Moscow, Russia, in 1988, and is currently attending high school in Canada. She has been previously published in Ballistic Publishing's Exotique.

Bob Stevlic

Born and raised in the Chicago area, Bob Stevlic worked as an illustrator for a consulting company before venturing into game art. While citing "many sources" for creative inspiration, he says his biggest influence in life has been Bruce Lee. Outside of art Bob's interests include mixed martial arts, motorcycles, and spending time with family.

Grégory Szucs

Grégory Szucs was born in France in 1980, and learned the basics of his craft at the Emile Cohl art school in Lyon, France. You can check out his portfolio at www.gribouillis.com.

Xia Taptara

Xia Taptara is a Seattle-based artist. More information can be found at <http://www.angelfire.com/wa2/xia/me.html>.

Rob Thomas

Robert Thomas is a self-taught artist from Boston. Much of his work is sketched in pencil and finished with acrylics and colored pencil or a stylus and Photoshop. He likes to draw strictly from imagination and rarely uses any reference unless absolutely necessary.

Grey Thornberry

Gret Thornberry is a Brooklyn-based artist specializing in creature and character illustration, and generally prefers working with dark or violent (implied or explicit) subject matter. His personal website is <http://www.greystudio.com>, and he is also a member of NinJa Mountain (<http://www.ninjamountain.net>), a small group of fantasy artists dedicated to professionalism and improving their craft.

Francis Tsai

Francis Tsai is a lead concept artist for High Moon Studios, a Southern California game company. He lives in San Diego with his wife Linda, an architect, and two cats, who are not architects. In addition to work in the games industry, Francis has contributed to projects in comics, television, and film. More information and artwork can be found at www.teamgt.com.

Cyril Van Der Haegen

Born and raised in Switzerland, Cyril Van Der Haegen moved to the USA a long time ago, has worked in the video game industry for a bit less than a decade, and has been in love with illustration all along. This is his third year freelancing.

Jessica Van Hulle

Jessica Van Hulle is a Bay Area native and resides and works in Oakland, CA. She received her B.F.A. in Illustration in May 2004 from the Academy of Art University in San Francisco. Van Hulle has been honored both nationally and locally for her artwork. She was the Spotlight Featured Artist of The Artist's Magazine, February 2003, and was a winner of the New York Society of Illustrators 2002 student competition. She has completed over 50 professional illustrations.

Walter Velez

Walter Velez is 66 years old. He was born, raised, and educated for the most part in New York. He attended the High School of Art and Design (in those days it was called the High School of Industrial Art) in the '50s, and later attended The School of Visual Arts and studied illustration with Burne Hogarth, creator of the original Tarzan Comic Strip and publisher of numerous well-known books on anatomy in action. He worked for a few years as a graphic designer and art director at various ad agencies and design studios. This was a priceless part of his education, since it taught him the mechanics of preparing art for print and film. After a few years of that he decided to do what he was trained to do and enjoyed the most, painting and illustration. Thanks to his agent Jill Bauman, he was able to find a niche in science fiction/fantasy, which he's been involved in for the last 30 years. He has illustrated book covers for most of the publishers of those genres, as well as for children's books, gaming, and record covers. You can check out the range of his work at <http://www.geocities.com/wvelezart>.

Sylvain Vialla

Sylvain Vialla (aka lasth) is a French artist born in 1981. Currently a graphic design and art student, he is a fan of dark, strange, odd, and violent universes, especially those of cyberpunk and sci-fi. He loves everything that looks weird and experimental and has a little fun in it. He spends his time drawing, reading comics, using the computer, listening to electronic, metal, and industrial music, and playing soccer. His website is <http://lasth.free.fr>.

Franz Vohwinkel

Franz Vohwinkel was born in 1964 in Munich, Germany, studied graphic design in Darmstadt, and achieved his degree in 1991. In the same year, he did the illustrations for his first board game, Drunter & Drüber. Since then, he has done the artwork for more than 200 games, and has won the prestigious German "Game of the Year" award three times. For many years Franz Vohwinkel has also been a true sci-fi and fantasy fan. In 1996 he was the first German illustrator to do artwork for Magic: The Gathering and the Battletech CCG. Ever since, the number of fantasy and sci-fi illustrations in his work has grown consistently. Among his personal favorites are his illustrations for Classic Battletech, the artwork he created for Dungeons & Dragons, and his work as illustrator and art director for the card game Blue Moon. In the last few years he has worked on the CCGs Legend of the Five Rings, Warhammer 40K, and A Game of Thrones. Besides his work in the gaming industry, he also illustrated book covers for German publishers. His illustrations have been repeatedly shown in Spectrum: The Best in Contemporary Fantastic Art. In 2006 he and his wife moved from Germany to the United States. They live and work in Seattle, Washington.

Shane Watson

Eric Wilkerson

Eric Wilkerson is an award-winning painter and illustrator living in the New York Hudson Valley. He has worked in publishing, on logo/concept design for feature films, and on various television commercial projects. His work has been honored in Spectrum: The Best in Contemporary Fantastic Art, Expose 1, CG Explorer 2, and most recently, Digital Art Masters Vol. 1 from 3D Total. He currently works as a character designer for an animation studio in NYC. Eric's work can be viewed online at www.starleagueart.com.

Jarreau Wimberly

Jarreau Wimberly was educated at the University of the Arts in Philadelphia and earned his BFA in 2004. Mr. Wimberly also...okay, sorry for the lame third person intro. To tell you the truth, I'm really a robot sent from the future—an unstoppable illustrating machine hell-bent on creating tremendously mind-blowing fantasy art. Oh yeah...and to kill Sarah Connor!

Brian Wood

Brian Wood is president of game company Hyperion and has previously edited the Fantasy Flight volume The Art of George R.R. Martin's "A Song of Ice and Fire."

ARKHAM HORROR

The Lovecraft Mythos Lives

Enter a world crawling with horrors from beyond space and time. Brave mysteries that will shred any mortal mind. Struggle to protect mankind from the deathless malevolence of the Great Old Ones.

Arkham Horror pits the players against the slumbering might of an ancient being from the Lovecraft Mythos, such as Yog-Sothoth, the Blind Idiot God Azathoth or Cthulhu himself! The investigators must battle eldritch terrors, venture into other worlds, seal mystical gates and retain their sanity in a quest to save Arkham before the Great Old One awakens!

With unique cooperative gameplay and immense replayability, Arkham Horror just gets better with the addition of Curse of the Dark Pharaoh and Dunwich Horror, adding new investigators, new Great Old Ones, new terrors, and new allies.

Arkham Horror VA09 $59.95

Curse of the Dark Pharaoh VA33 $29.95

Dunwich Horror VA32 $49.95

Curse of the Dark Pharaoh

The Exhibit is in town, and Arkham will never be the same! "The Legacy of the Pharaohs" seems like an ordinary museum exhibit, but there is something sinister in these relics from a forgotten kingdom ... and the dark forces that gather around Arkham know it. There is something potent and powerful among those artifacts from the past, but will it destroy Arkham ... or save it?

Howard Phillips Lovecraft (1890-1937), little-known to the public during his lifetime, is now recognized as the premier American weird fiction writer of the 20th century. His work has profoundly influenced several generations of science fiction, fantasy, and macabre writers. His tales of cosmic terror, and those of his many admirers and imitators, form an extensive body of fiction called the "Cthulhu Mythos," named after Lovecraft's most famous creation, the malign, many-tentacled alien god Cthulhu.

THE ART OF H.P. LOVECRAFT'S CTHULHU MYTHOS™

The Art of H.P. Lovecraft's Cthulhu Mythos is a journey into the dark and haunting images inspired by the books and stories of the Cthulhu Mythos. H.P. Lovecraft's stories have fueled the imaginations of hundreds of authors and countless readers, with their suggestions of ancient and terrible beings beside which humankind is insignificant, and the horrible truths that our minds are not meant to know. Now, for the first time, the art inspired by these classic tales of horror is collected in one lavish volume, featuring paintings and drawings by some of today's most talented artists, including Michael Komarck, Torstein Nordstrand, Paul Carrick, Anders Finer, and dozens of others.
